

REMEMBERING

THESE are the treasured photos of a precious son which have been released by his dad to mark the approaching fifth anniversary of the day he disappeared without trace. The pictures have been accompanied by a fresh appeal by Raymond Kelly for any information about his son Martin, almost five years on from the fateful day he vanished. The portfolio shows Martin on a number of different occasions in happier times when he was enjoying life in his home town of Hollywood and on holiday had absolutely everything to live for. His dad hopes the photographs may jog even a single memory or conscience and lead to any information at all about what happened to his much loved and desperately missed son. Raymond's appeal is the latest attempt to find clues about what became of Martin, now 26, since he went missing for no apparent reason from outside a Belfast bar on January 1 2006. Raymond Kelly has stressed that even one tiny piece of information could prove to be the first part of the jigsaw which ultimately completes the picture of what has become of Martin.

He said, "In particular I would appeal to the witnesses who were with Martin in the bar that night to revisit the scene in their minds to see if they can jog their memories in any way. "We don't want people to think that because it is now almost five years down the line that there is no point in coming forward, that it is too late in some way or another to do anything.

'OUR MARTIN'

"As far as we are concerned everything is still to play for here and I would appeal for anyone with any scrap of information, no matter how small, to let us know about it, whatever it is.

"It could be that someone considers what they know, or have seen, to be of little importance or even irrelevant, but they should let others be the judge of that and come forward.

"If anyone has a problem with doing so to the police for any reason, they can still give the information through a variety of other channels.

"For example they could go to a priest or a minister or contact the Missing Persons Helpline. The free phone number for that is 0800 700 700."

Martin, an apprentice plumber and part-time barman in the Old Priory Inn in Hollywood, was last seen on January 12006.

He had spent New Year's Eve working in the Hollywood bar and was celebrating the New Year with friends in Pat's Bar in Belfast's Clarendon Dock the next day.

Martin was last seen when he left the bar at about 7.30pm, possibly intending to return to his home in the Kinnegar area of Hollywood.

Exhaustive land and sea searches and a high profile publicity campaign across Britain and Ireland have so far failed to turn up any clues as to what happened to Martin Kelly.

The young Hollywood man definitely had everything to live for and was in the prime of his life when he disappeared.

He had embarked on a promising apprenticeship and supplemented that income with part-time work in the Hollywood bar. He hoped one day to buy a property abroad.

Just a few years prior to his disappearance Martin had worked in an orphanage in Africa between the ages of 17 and 18 and aspired to return there to help again.

Just a few nights before his disappearance Martin attended a party in Carmichaels of Hollywood, where she was seen chatting, joking and laughing with friends.

There are only theories as to what has become of the young Hollywood man who was then aged 21.

Could he have fallen into the docks and tragically drowned, with his body becoming trapped or snagged under the water in some way?

Could he have lost his memory after being innocently injured in some way or even been attacked by persons unknown?

Searches were conducted by police and other divers of the harbour where Martin disappeared.

Hundreds of volunteers joined extensive searches along the shores of Belfast Lough and the marshlands known as the Kinnegar Lagoons, which border the harbour estate.

A one point a specially trained dog, which can sniff out evidence of human remains in the water, was used in additional searches of the harbour.

Martin's family members conducted their own relentless searches for any scrap of information as to what has become of him.

His mum Karen embarked on her own month long search mission to highlight his case across England, Scotland and Wales.

Her trip, during which she fell ill with suspected heart trouble, publicised his case in 14 cities with accompanying TV, radio and newspaper information appeals.

Martin's dad Raymond extended his own search for his missing son to the south of the border.

He went to the Republic on a number of occasions in search of any scrap of information, including trips to Dublin, Limerick and Clare.

Martin Kelly is described as being six feet one inch tall and of slim build with short dark black hair.

When last seen almost five years ago he was wearing a black Guinness T-shirt and a pair of blue jeans.

The investigation into Martin's case is being conducted by the PSNI at Musgrave Street station in Belfast. They can be contacted on 0845 600 8000.
