Forensic examinations were carried out at the landfill site near the Lough foreshore where the discovery was made.

No formal identification has been made and a post mortem was due to take place.

The body was located at Dargan Road, about two miles from where Co Down plumber Martin Kelly, 21, vanished on New Year`s Day.

Mr Kelly, from Holywood, was last seen leaving Pat`s Bar on Garmoyle Street in Belfast`s docklands.

But it is not yet known how long the remains had been at the scene.

Police sealed off the area around a stretch of pathway where the body was discovered.

A PSNI spokeswoman said: "The circumstances surrounding the man`s death are being investigated.

"However, at this stage police are treating the death as suspicious."
