Psychic's Journey In Search For Martin

By David Young

Tuesday 14th March 2006

THE family of missing Co Down man Martin Kelly has employed the help of Britain's "top psychic" to help trace his whereabouts.

Welsh clairvoyant Diane Lazarus, who has helped police with missing persons' cases in England and the Republic, was asked by Mr Kelly's parents to re-trace their son's last known steps to see if she could sense what happened to him.

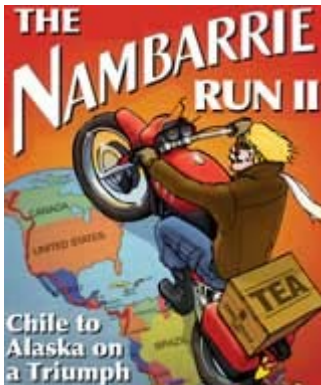

The plumber and part-time barman, who should have been celebrating his 22nd birthday today, was last seen leaving Pat's Bar in the Clarendon dock area of Belfast at around 7pm on New Year's day.

It's widely believed the Holywood man may have fallen into water nearby and drowned.

Police divers last month conducted extensive searches of the docks but failed to find a body.

Mrs Lazarus, who recently won a televised competition to establish the UK's best psychic, visited Pat's Bar last Friday in an attempt to visualise what exactly happened there on January 1.

After walking round the premises with photographs of Martin in her hand, the Carmarthen-based spiritualist outlined in detail what she believed he was doing before he left the bar.
